Outline

Successful cooperation relies on knowledge and people. Interreg professionals are skilled managers. While hard skills matter, in Interreg, soft skills are even more important. Soft skills are not “optional extras”; they are the foundation of effective cooperation. Soft skills are how we interact and communicate clearly, work in teams, handle conflicts and remain respectful to one another. They help us lead processes and tackle challenges effectively. They build trust and help us navigate complex, multicultural contexts.

Interact supports Interreg programmes in building their capacity for cooperation, including developing soft skills. In this event, we will focus on communication as a key skill for better cooperation between us.

“Strong relationships are based on trust and communication. But if there is no communication, there can be no trust” - Simon Sinek.

We invite you to join us, and together we will look at how we can better human-to-human interaction in the Interreg context. The event invites participants to share their experiences and discuss different ways to handle tough situations. It will provide an opportunity for mutual learning and training in soft skills.

Objective

The goal of this pilot event is to help Interreg practitioners to practise and improve their communication skills in their daily work. Participants will explore how their communication style influences trust, collaboration and problem-solving. The event creates a safe space to test new approaches, learn from peers and reflect on personal communication habits. By the end of the event, participants will gain practical ideas that they can use in their daily communication.
